Speaking at the City Liberal Club, at Walbrook on the 23rd March, at a complimentary dinner to which he had been invited. Lord Rose pery said :--

I believe Great Britain is the only country in he world that has a purely external foreign policy—that is to say, our foreign policy is the only one which is dictated at present by entirely external considerations. That I believe to be an approcedented position: We have been detached from the affairs of Europe, and to a large extent we have been detached from them not so much by the fact that the armies of the European system have become ise enermons that even under its present administration our army i not able to cope with them, but because we - Analyze it as you will-I am not now going to trend on hot coals in the matter of Egypt or Cyprus, but take the Eastern Question as you will, it is India. Putting Australia on one side, think you can divide the foreign policy of this empire into the Eastern and Western questions. and they are the questions of Judia and Canada, Our great empire has pulled us, so to speak, by the coat-tails out of the European system; and though we can never remove ourselves altogether from the European system, we must recognize that our foreign policy has become polonial policy, and is in reality at this moment much more dictated from the extremities of the empire than it is from London itself. That is a very remarkable fact. Is it a fact that we should deplore? I think not.

EUROPEAN WAR.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Standard, in a long telegram published on the 24th March, reviews the position of Russia in the event of a European war. He says, the fact is that Poland is the Achilles' heel of Russia. and not only does she know it, but she is aware that the is not alone cognizant of this. The weakness arises from two causes firstly, the geographical position of the province. We resterday had an interview with a retired and secondly, the inveterate and absolutely unappeasable hatred of the inhabitants. THE MOBILIZATION OF ABMIES.

The manuconcentration, gives a logical result which it is hard to combat. Taking the distances from the | $1.490. frontier and the number of railway lines on both sides converging thereto, we find that the advantage is somewhat greater than three to one in favour of the allies. Whereas the German mobilization would be complete in three days. and the Austrian in four or five the Russian would be defective after ten days. Whereas concentration would be begun by the allies on the fourth day, and in full swing in a week, the Russian concentration could only begin after a fortnight, and would proceed along its few and faulty lines at only a third of the pace of that of the allies. Therefore the Russian authorities, in order to remody their failing, are making haste in time of peace to fill Poland with the troops which should be brought up in time of war. They are perfectly well aware that a Prussian army advancing towards Bielostock from the northern frontier and an Austrian force coming from Sokal to Dobrin, would inevitably join hands at one or other of these two places, without ever entering their fortified square, if they were un- the Casine, especially luring last week. A very strange history is connected with the discovery of diamonds in Bahia. A cunning slave from Mines-Geraes, keeping his master's flocks in Bahin, thought he observed a similarity between the soil of his native place and that o Bahia. Be sought, therefore, in the sind and soon found 700 carats of diamonds. Fleeing from his master, he carried these with him and offered them for sale in a distant city. Such wealth—in—the hands of a slave caused him to be arrested, but he would not betray himself. The master to whom he was given up tried to get his secret by ounning, but without avail until he thought of restoring to him his former occupation in Bahia and watching him. As soon as the secret was known numbers flocked from Minas-Geraes and other par s of Brazil to Bahia, so that the following year as many as 25,000 people were occupied in seeking diamonds there and the amount daily obtained for some time rose to 450 carats.

A writer in the Gentlewoman says :-- Whother it is that women in the long run are found to be botter servants than men, or that, the times being bad, their more slender wages prove alluring to the careworn bousekeeper, the fact remains that footmen are being discarded in many houses, the reign of the parlour maid becoming supreme. The change in most respects is one to be commended, although the appearance of a maid when opening the front door, however trim she may be, compares unfav. ourably with the smartness of a well "turned out" footman, in all the pride of a speckless livery. One day, calling for the first time on some acquaintances in Enton-place, my breath was taken away when the door flow open, and three parlourmaids standing at intervals, attired in the most unfamiliar of costumes, dawned ago see view.
